Cave Hill, four miles from Belfast, is about 1,200 feet in height. The summit of the hill is crowned by MacArt's Fort, which was the stronghold of MacArt (O'Neill) during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. A magnificent bird's-eye view of Belfast and its surroundings is obtained from the top of the hill.

Rothesay, from Chapel Hill. Rothesay has long been recognised as the leading Scottish watering place. It is within 10 hours of London and 1½ hours of Glasgow. Its bay is unsurpassed for beauty, and is the headquarters of the Royal Northern Yacht Club. Naval squadrons frequently anchor in its shelter. The picture shows the Harbour, the Skipper's Wood, Craigmore and Craigmore Pier, and the Hills of Ayrshire in the distance.
